

Speaker Bio — Timothy E. King, M.D.

Dr. Timothy King is a board-certified anesthesiologist with additional certifications in pain management and addiction medicine. He is a co-founder of Centers for Pain Management, one of the largest pain management groups practicing in Northwest Indiana and Chicagoland.

He has been practicing pain medicine for 40 years, with interest in the medical and interventional approaches to pain control. He maintains licensure in seven states.

In addition to his clinical practice, Dr. King's serves as a consultant and expert witness via Midwest Medicolegal Alliance to government, insurance companies, attorney groups, and medical organizations on matters involving the proper prescribing of controlled substances.

Dr. King is a passionate instructor – willing to share his expertise on standards of care and the legitimate use of opiates in the treatment of chronic pain. He lectures regularly and has a reputation for being approachable and engaging with students and those interested in the practice of pain management.

He has served as associate professor in the Departments of Anesthesiology at the University of Washington, Indiana University, and Rush University – and is currently an associate member of the clinical staff at the University of Chicago.

Most importantly Dr. King is a devoted husband, father of four, avid land and sea pilot – and always open to engaging conversation.